

Giving New Meaning to the Phrase, "My Thoughts are With You."

"Hands-off" healer, Robert Ginsburg, taps into nature's energy with his mind.

Los Angeles, CA - Dr. Paul R. Honan, was asleep in his Indiana home when he was awakened by a severe attack of asthma, which could not be controlled with his regular medication. Rather than rush to the hospital, the Indiana University Clinical Medical School professor chose to call healer Robert Ginsburg of California. In a letter to Ginsburg the next morning the professor wrote, "I phoned you and you treated me. Twenty minutes later I reported to you again and there was some relaxation of bronchospasm. You treated me again. Thirty minutes later I could breathe deeply and was able to go to sleep. Thanks again for the rescue. The traditional treatment for the severity of my asthma experienced last evening is hospitalization with intravenous steroids and oxygen for several days."

Robert working over the telephone

This example of "hands off" healing is significant in that it not only shows a medical doctor turned to alternative healing in the moment of crisis, but it also proves energy healing can be effective from great distances. Ginsburg has the uncanny ability to identify problem areas by scanning the organism with his mind. He then uses his thoughts to attract, direct and program the energetic forces of nature to heal the located problem. Amazingly, Ginsburg can do this work if the person is in his physical presence or halfway around the world. He is currently working with a client in Singapore.

Ginsburg credits all his success with Dr. Honan and others to the energetic healing system he learned in his years of study with Russian physicist, Nicolai Levashov. Levashov has a graduate degree in Theoretical Physics and has taught his system to over 200 doctors in Russian medical school.

Noted doctors Andrew Weil and Larry Dossey gave their predictions for the future of alternative medicine in the January 2000 edition of Prevention Magazine. Weil said, "I think energy medicine is going to be one of the major medical developments of the next century." Dossey predicted we would use mind scans instead of an MRI to locate health problems and we will learn to use the power of the mind to heal. Ginsburg's work brings the future into the present.

Ginsburg is intelligent, soft-spoken, a Mr. Nice Guy who has a wealth of knowledge about human anatomy, physiology, pathology and physics. These qualities, paired with his obvious deep concern for the well being of others, gain him enormous credibility and spark interest in his work. Many will attest to Ginsburg's accomplishments. He was such a success with the audiences of the prestigious Commonwealth Club in San Francisco that they invited him back year after year.

Ginsburg's work is both groundbreaking and timely. The system he uses is a giant step forward in humanity's evolution. It is a testament to the human mind's ability to be able to use the vast energetic potential of nature to improve our life and health.